Mocktail Bar Must-Haves: Tools

A home mocktail bar is only as good as its tools and ingredients. Keeping these Mocktail Bar Must-Haves on hand will ensure you're always ready to mix the perfect drink.

The first tool every at-home mixologist should have is a jigger—the quintessential measuring tool for precise pours. One side holds 1 ½ oz, and the other holds ¾ oz.

Next is the classic three-piece shaker, which is made up of the shaking tin, the strainer and the cap. Shake ice and ingredients in the shaking tin with the cap on and replace the cap with the strainer when you're ready to pour. Mixing your drinks in a shaker creates a frostier, frothier drink and helps combine ingredients that would otherwise quickly separate.

All these pieces work together to thoroughly mix a drink, chill the contents quickly and pour a perfectly clean, crisp mocktail.

Another important tool is the bar spoon. Over time, three styles have become standard: The American, European, and Japanese bar spoons.

The American bar spoon holds 5 ml and has a red plastic cap on the top; the European bar spoon holds 2.5 ml and has a flat metal disk at the end for cracking ice and muddling. The Japanese bar spoon holds 2.5 ml and has a weighted teardrop at the end for easier handling.

These long spoons are perfect for stirring drinks in any size of glass and layering different ingredients without the colours mixing into each other (also known as floating). The spoons with twisted handles also allow you to pour down the length of the handle without splashing, even in the fizziest of drinks.

Perfect those measurements, stirs, shakes and pours and reward yourself with an ice-cold mocktail.

Mocktail Bar Must-Haves: Rims and Garnishes

Even the best tasting mocktails are incomplete without the right garnish. Here are some essential garnishes you should keep on hand for the perfect at-home mocktail bar.

First, you need rimmers: seasonings to put on the edge of your glass to add an extra layer of flavour to each sip.

Salted rims are great for refreshing cocktails like mock-aritas, and you can mix them up by adding other spices like chili powder or dill.

Sugared rims are best for sweeter drinks like a cos-mock-politan. Try mixing these up with ground cinnamon or lavender for extra flavour.

And of course, every Manitoban should have caesar rim—an equal mix of Montreal steak spice and celery salt.

Pickles and olives are perfect in-drink garnishes that moonlight as late-night snacks. Elevate the classic cocktail with a pimento-stuffed queen olive and get a perfect crunch for savoury mocktails with kosher dill pickles. Basically, if it's pickled, it belongs in your mocktail bar!

Citrus fruits are the most common garnish. Lemons, limes, and oranges can be presented as a wedge or a wheel on many drinks, or you can give their peels a twist for added class.
